PS391: LGBT Politics

This course will provide a general survey of the historical, political, and policy issues relating to gays and lesbians in the United States. While this is a course on LGBT politics it will draw on material from psychology, sociology, political science, law, and public policy. Many of the subjects that are discussed in this class will be directly applicable to other minority groups and issues. Throughout the semester we will make considerable effort to apply theories and lessons from the United States to events and issues in other countries.
